b. Enemy Reserves.

No reserve, as such, is known to exist.

c. Enemy activity during period.

The enemy engaged in intensive patrolling and generally sporadic artillery and mortar fire. His patrols ranged from 3 to 10 men in size and one as large as 70 men was reported, in vicinity of HOFEN (K9514). Other patrols of normal size and normal procedure continued to operate along the line (K0307) to (K9709) engaging in a fire fight only when necessary. Enemies entire action was limited to intelligence or counter intelligence activity. From 28 October 44 to the end of the period the enemy shelled guns positions and rear area installations sporadically and in several instances in a concentration with guns ranging in caliber from 105mm to 170mm. These guns fired together and seemed to be firing from the same location. Several concentrations fell at (K96403695) consisting of both calibers (105mm and 170mm).

d. Enemy strength, material means, morale and probable knowledge of our situation.

(1) On our immediate front he has available an estimated 3000 men and 3 medium Artillery Battalions. However, it is estimated that he may be able to mass as many as 9000 men. Six (6) Battalion Medium and Heavy Artillery and 20-30 tanks for use against us by drawing from less active fronts and other units undergoing training deep in Germany.

(2) Supply as far as food and ammunition is concerned is fair up to this point although there is definitely a shortage of AT guns, Bazookas, and Artillery pieces. Each machine gun is reported to carry from 8000, to 11,000 rounds each. No evidence as to the availability of any of the new mines although many new types are being used has been found.

(3) Enemy morale is not that of a victorious army, but could be called fair under their present situation. This probably because they are fighting on their own soil, some in or near their own homes. Despite this spirit shown to us he is easily brokendown by long periods of artillery fire and air bombardment which shows that the lessons taught in France have been carried home. The continued use of the SS and the SA in his rear areas is becoming somewhat of a disturbance to the individual soldier.

(4) The enemy probably has some knowledge of our situation inasmuch as his patrols have been very active and his reconnaissance aircraft have made several flights over our area. Due to his knowledge of the limitations of this particular terrain which is even readily seen from a map reconnaissance. His knowledge of our gun positions is probably very accurate. (Evidenced by counter battery).

e. The enemy may attack from the Northeast to the Southwest astride the road from HURTGEN (FO40355) with as much as 2 Battalions of Infantry supported by 4 Battalions of Medium and Heavy Artillery and from 10-20 tanks to eject us from our salient into his line to enable him to reoccupy the Siegfried Line. This plan could be put into operation within five hours time.

He may carry out this same plan from the direction of WOFFELSPACH (FO527).

It is possible for the enemy to use planes in numbers up to 10 or 20 to support any attack or counterattack that he may throw against us. These could consist of fighters and fighter bombers.

2. OWN SITUATION:

a. Does not apply.

b. See overlay attached as inclosure #1.

c. Attached to 28th Infantry Division Artillery.

d. General: The month of October, 1944 was one of relative quiet for the 630th Tank Destroyer Battalion, although guns were in position the major part of the time. The 28th Infantry Division, which this unit supported, continued as part of the V Corps of the U.S. First Army. Enemy activity experienced by the division was slight.

At the beginning of October the 28th Infantry Division, with the 630th TD Bn in direct support, was part way through the SIEGFRIED LINE inside the German border. The 109th RCT (supported by Company "A" (minus 1st Platoon) had made a partial penetration in the vicinity of SEVENIG and HARSPELT and the 110th RCT (supported by Company "E") had a fair size hole in the line vicinity BERG and HECKHUSHEID.
