SUBJECT: Transmittal of Records.

TO : Commanding General, Fifth Army, A.O. 166, U. S. Army.

1. Pursuant to instructions contained in Letter, Allied Force Headquarters, dated 20 April 1944, file AG 217.7/389 C-1, Subject: Historical Records and Histories of Organizations, transmitted herewith Operations in Italy, March 1944 of this Battalion.

2. Conclusions:

One M-10 tank destroyer of this unit was damaged by a bomb from a friendly bomber during the bombing of Cassino by our Air Force. Only one casualty resulted from this direct hit due to the habit of the destroyer crews digging elaborate foxholes and dugouts near their destroyer in which they live when not actually firing on the enemy. This enables them to take cover during bombing attacks by high level planes. If the planes are watched there is time to take cover when the bomb racks are seen to open and spill their bombs. Friendly ground troops should not be too close to enemy targets when a friendly high level bombing mission is to be accomplished.

HEADQUARTERS 636th TANK DESTROYER BATTALION
MCO 464, U. S. Army

3 April 1944

OPERATIONS IN ITALY, MARCH 1944

The beginning of the month of March found "A" Company at 913213, "B" Company at 912215, and "C" Company at 920211, all forward positions where they were awaiting the order to attack up the Liri Valley. The first two weeks of weather during the month were wet and disagreeable. The Battalion Commander several times planned to move the Companies back to a rear area but due to the uncertainty of the situation they remained in forward positions.

One request was made to the Commanding General, Combat Command "B", to move companies but it was evidently not favorably considered because no reply was received.

The Battalion Commander and Staff checked the Companies on several different occasions and also spent a good deal of time perfecting plans for the forthcoming operation. Traffic Controls Posts were checked and several Company Commander meetings were held to be sure that all orders and plans were fully understood.

On 14 March at approximately 1930, the Battalion was alerted by Liaison Officer from Combat Command "B", that the attack was to take place the following day. The field order was received and plans for the next days activities were made by the Battalion Commander and Staff.

At 0730 on 15 March, the Battalion Command Group began its movement to the forward Command Post at Cervaro. At 0845 all elements of the Command Group closed into the new command post. A message center was established and communications were immediately set up with our Companies and Traffic Control Headquarters. All officers who were to maintain Traffic Control Posts reported to the CP to be dispatched to their regular stations as they were called for.

From 0835 to 1200 continuous flights of American Bombers bombed Cassino. Some bombs were dropped in the area occupied by our Company "C". One load of bombs was accidentally dropped near Cervaro.

Friendly artillery began its concentration at noon. Companies "A" and "B" reported their missions complete at 1247. Company "C" reported that no targets of opportunity had been picked up consequently they expended no ammunition.

Orders were received from the 3-2, Combat Command "B" that all traffic control stations up to Co. 1 would be manned by 1500. Forward control posts were to be manned as the situation progressed.

The Battalion Commander and S-4 left the C-1 to occupy Traffic Control Headquarters. While at the Headquarters the Battalion Commander contacted Major Jenkins, the New Zealand Provost Marshal, and personally inspected all traffic control posts on Highway 6.

At 1709 it was reported that the Indians were on the hill west of Hill 193.

At 1825 a message was received from our Liaison Officer that tanks were 75 yards from objective Quisling. Further advance was impossible without engineer aid. Hand to hand fighting and small arms fighting was taking place in Cassino and on Monte Cassino.

Combat Command "B" called intermittently during the night to give the situation and to keep us posted on any forward movements. Officers manning control posts stayed on duty throughout the night. Their positions were shelled intermittently during the night. During the day the Battalion expended 744 rounds of H.E. on observed targets.

At 0541, 16 March, Combat Command "B" called and said that the bridge on Highway 6 had been finished and that certain reconnaissance elements had gone across.

The Battalion Commander and S-3 spent most of the day at Traffic Control Headquarters keeping up with the situation. Traffic Control posts were relieved and re-manned to give the officers needed rest.

At 1900, a flight of 3-25 American Bombers dropped bombs in Company "C"'s area. One man was injured, Sgt James T. Boyd, 38060607, one M-10 was damaged to the extent that it had to be evacuated. The tank was evacuated during darkness and a replacement sent in the following day. During the day Co "B" expended 31 rounds of H.E.

The Battalion Commander and S-3 spent most of the day, 17 March 1944 at Traffic Control Headquarters. From this point in the early afternoon they directed "A" and "B" Companies fire on an enemy nobelwerfer.

At 1700 the Battalion Commander and S-3 returned to the Battalion Command Post. Traffic Control Posts on Highway 6 were subjected to intermittent shell fire during the day.

At 1715 the Company Commanders reported to the Battalion Command Post where the Battalion Commander ordered that the Company Commanders should spend more time with the gunners. He stressed that Company Commanders should emphasize the closing of sheafs.

Before the Company Commanders returned to their Companies an enemy artillery shell struck the Command Post. Several others were close-in. No one was injured.

The Liaison Officer to Combat Command "B" reported that four friendly tanks had gone to Cassino. Their approach to Cassino was observed by all Battalion OP's. Two were witnessed burning from the Battalion Command Post by the Executive Officer. No exact reports were to be had concerning the situation. The Battalion expended 1,631 rounds of A.T. and 48 rounds of smoke on observed targets during the day.

The following morning the Battalion Commander and S-3 took station at the Traffic Control Headquarters. Traffic Control Posts were manned all during 18 March by our officers. The Battalion Commander and S-3 remained at Traffic Control Headquarters throughout the day and on different occasions fired the companies on observed targets. The Company Commanders were called to Traffic Control Headquarters to observe the fires of their Companies and to make adjustment whenever necessary. Intermittent shell fire fell all along Highway 6 during the day. Captain Kinnison, manning Traffic Control Post #3, was subjected to heavy artillery concentrations.

At 0906 hours enemy aircraft dive-bombed friendly frontline positions. The 1st Armored Group forward Command Post suffered casualties from the bombing in both human lives and material destroyed. The Battalion Commander observing the bombing of the group headquarters from his post some 400 yards away made arrangements with the Companies to provide transportation to evacuate the 1st Armored Group personnel to the rear for reorganization.

Several enemy air raids took place during the day. The enemy planes usually strafed Highway 6 in the vicinity of Traffic Control Post #1 located at the Cervaro and Highway 6. Sgt Hipskind, Tec 5 Novelli, and Pvt 1 cl Helms, manning two .50 Caliber machine guns on the Battalion Commanders and S-3 vehicles, stuck to their posts and fired on all enemy planes despite their strafing and bombing.

RESULTS

The Battalion silenced enemy nebelwerfers and destroyed one enemy S.P. gun by direct fire from Company "C". During this action the Battalion expended 795 rounds of M. 2. and 38 rounds of smoke.

The following morning the S-3 called Combat Command "B" to obtain information on the situation. The only information received was that the enemy had counter-attacked on Hill 193 but no results as to their success had been received. The Battalion Commander, S-3, and S-2 studied recent S-2 reports and maps for possible targets.

The Battalion Commander and S-3 left the J for Traffic Control Headquarters. In the afternoon the Company Commanders were called to Traffic Control Headquarters to witness firing of their Companies.

Several enemy air raids took place during the day, 19 March. There was much bombing and strafing of Highway 6 in the vicinity of Traffic Control Headquarters. Our .50 Cal. machine guns were fired at enemy planes that were within range during the day.

At the end of the day 19 March, the enemy held Hill 165 and our forces were still holding Hill 193.

Enemy artillery fire was active during the night.

Combat Command "B" called the S-1 to report that a telegram had been received stating that Sgt Sgt Cole of Company "C" and Sgt Sgt Heaves of Company "A" had been promoted to 2d Lieutenants.

During the morning of 20 March word was received that Hills 193, 435, and 292 were in hands of Allied troops.

The Battalion Commander, S-3, S-2, and Company Commanders spent most of the day at Traffic Control Headquarters directing fire at observed targets. The Battalion expended a total of 639 rounds of M. 2. and 50 rounds of smoke on these fires.

The Traffic Control Post #4 manned by Lt Hauck and Traffic Control Post #10 manned by Lt Witten were subjected to heavy enemy artillery fire during the night. Throughout the night enemy artillery was very active.

In the early morning hours of 21 March, enemy artillery dropped large high velocity shells in the Battalion Command Post area and Reconnaissance Company area. One of the shells struck the building in which the Battalion CP was housed wounding three New Zealand Officers in an adjoining room. The Battalion Commander and Staff decided it best to move the command post and the Battalion Commander and S-3 reconnoitered a new position. The new position selected was at 927206.

The Battalion Commander and S-2 left for Traffic Control Headquarters. There they were called to Headquarters, 5th New Zealand Armored Brigade where they conferred with the Commander, Brigadier Burrows. Brigadier Burrows asked Lt Colonel Hyland if it would be possible for the Battalion to lay fire safely within 200 yards of friendly troops. Lt Colonel Hyland, the Battalion Commander, stated that he could do so as the Battalion was registered on a building very near the spot on which fire was wanted.

A telephone line was laid from this Battalion to the New Zealand organization and plans were made to support with observed fire the following day.

During the early morning hours of 22 March enemy artillery was heavy in both the forward and rear areas. The visibility was very poor. Lt Gould, one of the Traffic Control Officers, called and stated that his headquarters had been shelled. The house was knocked down over the cave entrance to his Company post. It was necessary for he and his crew to dig out. Lt Gould was slightly wounded by falling debris. The Traffic Control headquarters occupied by the Battalion Commander, S-3 was again subjected to enemy artillery and enemy air raids several times during the day.

From 1100 to 1645 hours the Battalion Commander directed fire into the Continental Hotel in Cassino with great effect. Lt Colonel McGaffey, in a tank near the Continental Hotel, also helped adjust the fire. The Battalion's expenditure of ammunition on this mission was 300 rounds of H.I. and 25 rounds of smoke.

In the afternoon Combat Command "B" called to state that the Battalion was temporarily relieved of Traffic Control duties. No further information could be obtained.

The Executive Officer and S-2 attended a unit commanders meeting at Combat Command "B" at 1800 hours. The meeting was called to discuss the general quality of military courtesy which prevailed under the Command "B".

A snow storm covered the area during the afternoon of 23 March. Visibility was very poor.

Company "C" was shelled out of their Command Post during the night. Casualties resulted. The S-3 called Combat Command "B" and told them about the shelling. Company "C" remained in its position although the Command Post was moved to the base end of the building formerly occupied.

At 1915 hours Combat Command "B" called the Battalion Commander and told him that he was to send four M-10's into Cassino to knock down some buildings and drive enemy tanks out. The Battalion Commander and S-3 discussed with General Allen the feasibility of this plan. The Battalion Commander, Lt Colonel Ryland, stated that it was against all principles of Tank Destroyer tactics to use M-10's in this manner. He did state however that from the Battalion's present positions he believed the job could be done. Lt Colonel Ryland was ordered to contact General Parkinson, New Zealand Division Commander, for instructions. General Parkinson ordered Lt Colonel Ryland to make arrangements with Brigadier Burrows of the 5th New Zealand Brigade for our M-10's to go into Cassino to perform this mission. Lt Colonel Ryland and the S-3 drove to the 5th New Zealand Brigade Headquarters and conferred with Brigadier Burrows. Combat Command "B" called later in the evening to tell us the plan had been discarded and that we were removed from alert status until 0800 hours, 27 March.

During the day, 24 March enemy artillery was active, harassing both forward and rear areas. No firing was done by the destroyer companies.

Our Liaison Officer reported from Combat Command "B" in the evening hours of 24 March that the Battalion would move back to the vicinity of Sambagliano. The Battalion Commander decided that it would be best to move to the vicinity of Picilli in order to reorganize and get all elements of the Battalion together. Permission was given by Combat Command "B" to make this move. All Companies were alerted to the fact that they would move at daylight, 25 March.

Reconnaissance Company furnished personnel for AA crews from 20 March to 24 March inclusive. During this time 450 rounds of .50 Cal. ammunition was expended.

Movement began at daylight with Company "C" moving out first. "B", "A", Reconnaissance Company, and the Battalion Command Post moved in that order. The Battalion closed in at the Picilli area at 1230 hours. At 1545 hours our Liaison Officer to Combat Command "B" reported in and stated that effective 1500, 25 March, we were detached from Combat Command "B" and would revert to control of our parent organization, the 36th Infantry Division.

The 26th and 27th March were spent in making preparations for the Battalion's movement to an area in the vicinity of Maddaloni. The Battalion Commander, Staff Officers, and the Company Commanders reconnoitered, and selected a suitable bivouac for the Battalion west of Maddaloni.

The first elements of the Battalion started their movement to the Maddaloni area at 0800 hours. The Battalion was closed in the bivouac area at 290776 at 1100 hours.

During the last three days of the month the Battalion devoted its time to maintaining vehicles and the cleanliness of personal equipment. All personnel were sent through a shower and clothing-exchange unit. The Special Service Officer arranged for certain recreational activities.
