SUBJECT: Reports of Operations for Period 1-31 March 1944

TO : Commanding General, Third Infantry Division, APO #3, U. S. Army

a. Summary of Our Operations:

Attached to Third Infantry Division from 1-28 March and 34th Infantry Division, 28-31 March, VI Corps, the Battalion remained in defensive positions for the month. The first few days were in continuation of a coordinated enemy Infantry and tank attack that began on 29 February with our units repelling attack by all enemy tanks and destroying or disabling 16 of these tanks during the period. The remainder of the period was devoted to improving defensive positions, firing harassing and interdictory fires and occasional tank shooting and house destruction missions.

Reconnaissance Company patrolled all roads in the Division road net forward of the Canal; operated three OP's during the period.

During the latter part of the period, "C" Company, 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion and "C" Company, 805th Tank Destroyer Battalion (attached) relieved elements of this Battalion in front line positions. These elements moved into reserve and flank positions and one Company started rest, rehabilitation, maintenance, and training.

Tabulation of enemy and our losses is contained in Annex #1.

b. Summary of Enemy Operations:

During the period the enemy attacked vigorously with tanks accompanied by infantry, with resulting losses in tanks from our fire, and eventual withdrawal. For the remainder of the period the enemy mined avenues of approach, wired and booby trapped around houses which he holds, and in general showed an entirely defensive attitude.

After the initial attacks, enemy armor has been used very sparingly, and when observed by our OP's, artillery has succeeded in destroying or damaging it.

Harassing fire of all calibers of artillery was kept up by the enemy during the period. Over a period of time, the enemy counter-battery has proved to be very inaccurate.

c. Situation at End of Period:

"C" Company, 701st Tank Destroyer Battalion in position on 168th Infantry Regiment front with "C" Company, 601st Tank Destroyer Battalion in reserve in positions forward of the Canal. "C" Company, 805th Tank Destroyer Battalion in position on 135th Infantry Regiment front with "A" Company, 601st Tank Destroyer Battalion in reserve positions forward of the Canal. "B" Company, 601st Tank Destroyer Battalion assembled in rear of Canal for (1) Rest, rehabilitation, maintenance, and training with Third Infantry Division (2) Counter-attack force with the 133rd Infantry Regiment. Operating with the 34th Infantry Division in defensive positions with little or no enemy activity..

d. Status of Personnel and Materiel:

Morale continued to be high during enemy tank attacks but lowered with continuous sitting in tanks in front line positions and no action. All positions had been relieved by the end of the month and all men had an opportunity to rest and clean up. Replacements with training capable of going into combat are still badly needed. Rotation replacements are slow in arriving.

Vehicles and guns also have been retated for complete maintenance and about 90% of maintenance needs were accomplished by the close of the period.

e. Comments and Lessons Learned:

(1) One of the most important points, stressed by Allied Force Headquarters, Fifth Army and all Tank Destroyer experts, is that infantry commanders continue, against the tactical advice of these persons, to place Tank Destroyers in forward anti-tank positions where they can have only one logical field of fire instead of placing them in a central positbn where they can move rapidly to cover a logical area. This tends to:

(a) Absolutely nullify the purpose of the Tank Destroyer — Mobility.

(b) Place the Tank Destroyer under small arms and mortar range where it will be immediately rendered less effective if the enemy plans to neutralize our resistance prior to attack. The open turret of the M-10 makes it vulnerable to sniper fire. This long-range 3" gun on its thin-shelled mobile chassis can engage and knock out a tank at a much greater range than infantry commanders realize.

(c) Draw unnecessary fire on nearby infantry.

(2) Some metal overhead cover for the open turret of the M-10 should be developed to protect the crew from flak and falling buildings. It can be so constructed that it can be thrown off if the Tank Destroyer moves out to engage the enemy. Plans are being made to construct these locally.

(3) In the role of firing night harassing missions, it has been found that a minimum of counter-battery will be received if only one gun fires at a time. Should the number of rounds to be fired or the time allotted require that two guns fire at the same time, it is best to space the guns as far apart as possible. This Battalion fired 4 guns for 6 or 7 nights, a total of 800 rounds, and received no counter-battery in an area that enemy fire was a most common occurrence.

(4) At least 6 to 8 power magnifying direct fire telescope is needed on the M-10.

(5) A smoke generator should be available in each M-10. When enemy fire develops they can be used to a definite advantage. The Germans use them most effectively to our disadvantage.
