While walking a short distance behind his company on a highway, a passing reconnaissance car ran over a mine which exploded. Although the concussion threw him several yards and dazed him momentarily, he regained his feet and staggered to the burning vehicle which was laying on its side and burning fiercely. As he lifted one of the occupants from the burning vehicle the flames reached some small arms ammunition in the front of the car, causing the rounds to explode. Completely disregarding his own personal safety, he carried the first man away from the scene and
